April 1993 and delivered a lecture on "Kibbutz Hogwarts" at the Interdisciplinary Seminar in "Women during the Holocaust" at the Interdisciplinary Seminar in Jerusalem and George Washington University in March 1993. She also spoke about the Kibbutz and its role in various countries, including Poland and the United States. She is now living in Jerusalem and is also working on a study of German and the collective memory of the Holocaust through the lens of the Kibbutz. She is also involved in the "Machon Kibbutzim" to be founded in Germany after the war. The first "Machon Kibbutzim" was completed after the study of Kibbutz Adullam.

Research and Projects

- Prof. Dan Michman, Chairman of the Initiatives and Research Forum.
The Institute is also in negotiations with the Bar-Ilan University of the Hofffman Center for Graduate Studies, located in the heart of the Tel Aviv University campus. The Center is dedicated to fostering research and collaboration in the field of Jewish Studies. The Institute's goal is to establish a strong partnership that will enhance the academic and intellectual exchange between the two institutions.

The Institute's primary focus is on Jewish Studies, with a particular emphasis on the study of Orthodox Judaism and its role in contemporary society. The Institute's research and teaching programs are designed to provide a comprehensive understanding of the diversity of Jewish experience and to promote interdisciplinary approaches to the study of Jewish culture and history.

The Institute also hosts a number of events, including conferences, workshops, and lectures, which are open to the public. These events are designed to foster dialogue and promote the exchange of ideas among scholars and students from around the world.

In addition to its academic pursuits, the Institute is committed to community engagement and outreach. It strives to connect with local Jewish communities and to promote greater understanding and appreciation of Jewish culture and history.

Overall, the Institute is dedicated to advancing the study of Jewish Studies and to fostering a vibrant and dynamic community of scholars and students, committed to exploring the rich and complex tapestry of Jewish culture and history.
Publication of a Book on Holocaust Revisionism

The Holocaust Revisionist movement seeks to undermine the historical reality of the Holocaust, advocating that the mass murder of Jews during World War II was either exaggerated or entirely fabricated. This movement is often associated with ideological beliefs that question the authenticity of historical events, particularly those involving significant implications for political and social considerations.

2. On January 6, 1999, Dr. Shlomo Telbost, a prominent figure in Holocaust revisionist circles, delivered a lecture on the topic of Holocaust denial. The lecture was held at the Interuniversity Seminar, and it served as a platform for discussing the challenges and controversies surrounding the accurate representation of historical events.
3. On February 7, 1999, the department of History at Tel Aviv University hosted a second conference on 'The Holocaust: A Global Perspective.' This event aimed to address the implications of Holocaust denial and its impact on contemporary discussions of history and memory.
4. On April 30, 1999, a lecture by Professor Avraham Bromstein at Bar-Ilan University highlighted the need for critical engagement with revisionist arguments, emphasizing the importance of accurate historical narratives.

Footnotes:

In 1939, the Baader group escaped into the woods to survive the German occupation of Poland, the first stage in their escape from the Warsaw Ghetto. The Baader group, consisting of four young men, managed to reach the forest and blend into the landscape.

The Baader group was led by Gerhard T. and his trusted comrade, Werner M., who had extensive experience in the underground movement in Poland. They were accompanied by young women, including Katharina M. and Sabine N., who provided critical support and intelligence.

As the group trekked deeper into the forest, they encountered a variety of obstacles, including retired German military officers and local collaborators who were actively hunting down escapees. The Baaders and their companions were forced to adopt various disguises and travel in small groups to avoid detection.

Despite these challenges, the Baaders and their associates managed to evade capture and ultimately reach the border with the Soviet Union. From there, they continued their journey to freedom, determined to resist the forces of oppression and ensure that their comrades in the Ghetto were not forgotten.

The Baaders' experiences, along with those of other escapees, form the basis of a powerful testament to human resilience and the indomitable spirit of those who sought to break free from the clutches of tyranny. Their story serves as a reminder of the courage and sacrifice required to stand up against injustice.
Women during the Holocaust

A second focus of attention is on women and the Holocaust. Two books have recently been published:

Both books provide valuable insights into the experiences of women during the Holocaust. In Voices of Experience, 14 women from different backgrounds and countries share their stories, offering a glimpse into the lives of women who survived the Nazi concentration camps.

Women and the Holocaust: New Perspectives includes essays by scholars and activists who explore the role of women in the Holocaust and its aftermath, shedding light on the challenges they faced and the ways in which they contributed to the resistance and survival.
